Saying it with sandwiches

By DON McCORMACK

EL CERRITO — Concerned by disappearance of many children nationwide, the Police Department will offer free fingerprinting of local children and teen-agers, starting March 3.

No fingerprint cards will be kept by the police. Instead, the cards will be given to parents, said Detective Danny Bell.

"Heaven forbid that anything should happen to the children," Bell said. But often a body is found with no identification, which makes it hard to trace relatives, he added.

Also when very young children are found and cannot remember their names, fingerprints makes identification easier, Bellsaid.

The project, funded by the El Cerrito Police Officers Association, was prompted by the heightened interest nationally in lost, stolen or runaway children and by the recent finding of Tara Burke of West Pittsburg, Bell said.

Tara, 2, was kidnapped early last year from a Central County parking lot and found alive just before Christmas, a prisoner of two men who lived in a van.

Using 1982 statistics, Bell estimated about 25,000 children a year either run away from home, or are kidnapped or stolen by parents or relatives, or are lost. "That is an awful lot of kids," he said.

The fingerprinting will be done every Thursday from 1 to 4 p.m., Bell continued. If the demand is high, it will probably be done on Saturdays.

Should the program, which is being done by several other cities in the country, prove popular, the police officers association will offer its services to the Richmond Unified School District. Bell also hopes other cities will offer fingerprinting.

Bell recommended fingerprinting for anyone younger than 16. The Police Department is located at 10900 San Pablo Ave. For more information, call Bell at 237-2123.

They're off and betting

The season opener was muddy

GGF starts its 37th season

By JAMIE ALISON COHEN

ALBANY — A coffee-brown stallion staggers in the mulch that will soon be combed into Golden Gate fields racetrack. The jockey gently tugs at the reins, guiding the horse back to the stables where it will be groomed.

Nothing, not the leaden morning, not the pack of striking janitors who swear viciously at anyone crossing the picket line, not the soggy track, dulls the brightness that consumes Golden Gate Fields on opening morning.

In two hours, anxious bettors will whirl through the turnstiles and the park's 37th season of thoroughbred racing will begin. In preparation, the horses are shod, their tails braided; the jockeys shower and dress; counterer impale hotdogs on a broiler; janitors striking by the Southgate entrance fortify their picket line.

In the jockeys' room, damp haired young men wander about, flashing nervous grins. They do not mention the custodians' strike. So long as the races go on, it does not concern them.

What does concern them is mud. They make happy remarks when a blue, white topped tractor smooths over the track.

The track's first customer looks through the gate barring her from the stadium like a prisoner peering through cell bars.

GGF, strikers will mediate

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — Officials of three racing associations have agreed to federal mediation in a janitors' strike now entering its second week at Golden Gate Fields, GGF manager Peter Tunney said Friday.

Contract negotiations between the Theater and Amusement Janitors Local 9 and racetrack management broke broke down just days before the Albany track opened for this year's 100-day racing season.

Tunney said Friday that officials from the Pacific Racing Association, Tanforan Racing Association and

Looking at local customs

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

It's a time for settling old debts, buying new clothes, sending last year's Kitchen God up to heaven, giving this year's blessings by the door, feasting and visiting relatives.

Today marks the start of the Chinese new year, the year 4681 by the lunar calendar. By the cycle of Chinese zodiac, we have entered the year of the Boar.

In China, the lunar new year — also known as spring festival — is the biggest holiday of the year. Traditionally, festivities would go on for a month, and nowadays everybody takes at least three days off. Many Chinese in America observe the holiday to some degree. For some, it may mean a big family dinner on the eve of the New Year. For others, it involves more elaborate customs which the older generation brought to this country half a century ago.

You can generalize and say, oh, the Chinese love their traditional festivals, and they all do this and they all do that. It's not like that," according to Jack Chen of El Cerrito, who lived in China for 20 years and is the author of a history of the Chinese of America.

Families in which "the older members give the tone to the family" are surprisingly traditional in their observance of the festival, Chen said. On the other hand, he went on, "the younger generation celebrate like a lot of people celebrate Christmas: they put up the Christmas tree and don't think anything of it — it's just done."

"Each one of us is a little different," said Wei-Chi Poon, librarian of the Asian-American studies department at UC-Berkeley. "There's no pattern; it depends on the individual family."

Specific customs and celebrations vary from region to region and even from village to village in China, Poon noted. "It's a very complicated situation." Many of the major differences revolve around food. For instance, a traditional spring festival food in northern China is steamed meat dumplings, called "jiaozi" in Peking dialect and sometimes translated as Peking ravioli on Chinese restaurant menus in this country. Southern Chinese, meanwhile, make sweet fried dough balls filled with bean paste which are not conventional in the north.

That diversity is reflected in the Chinese community of America as well, Poon said. "People in suburban areas are different from in San Francisco, people in San Francisco are different from in New York."

Poon often doesn't have time to do anything for the new year, but usually she brings her two children over to her parents' home for a dinner on new year's eve or the next day. "Usually my parents prepare everything," she said.

In spending the new year with her parents, Poon actually is violating a traditional taboo: married daughters

are not supposed to see their parents until at least the second day of the new year.

Daisy Leong of El Cerrito observes this moratorium, however, because her parents in San Francisco are of the old school. She, her husband Franklin and their two children generally welcome the new year with her parents-in-law in Berkeley.

The taboo stems from the Chinese belief that when a daughter marries, she leaves her own family to join her husband's family. If she were to return to her own parents first thing in the new year, it would mean something bad had befallen her.

Leong said she sometimes argues with her mother that the custom is outdated, but her parents cling to it quite strongly.

"My mother picks a day to 'open the new year,' and then my sister and I and everybody all go to have dinner there," she said. "That's the way to see the married daughters."

Franklin Leong said his parents don't care about this custom. They would welcome his sister home on new year's eve, for instance.

However, he added, the parents of his sister's husband would object, so his sister still waits a day or two before bringing new year's greetings to her parents.

"A lot of these things are losing their meaning," he noted, "since the younger generation doesn't believe in them anymore."

Traditional preparations for the new year require a thorough housecleaning. It is also a time to make or buy new clothes.

The most tradition-minded burn pictures of the Kitchen God, posted in the kitchen the previous year. First, however, they smear his mouth with honey to make sure he will have only sweet things to report to the ancestors when he gets to heaven. His picture is replaced by a new one to oversee the coming year.

The night when the old year gives way to the new may be a sleepless one; another old custom is to stay awake the whole night and catch up on sleep in the morning.

Franklin, Leong's parents follow the Buddhist custom of eating only vegetarian food on the first day of the new year. The main dish is a meatless concoction of bean threads, bean curd, seaweed, fungus, black mushrooms, bamboo shoots, Chinese cabbage and other vegetables, called "jai."

But the night before new year's, the banquet is lavish. It includes chicken, pork and vegetable dishes.

Fish is a significant dish because the Chinese character for fish, pronounced "yu" in Peking dialect, has the same sound as the character for plenty.

An important part of new year's day for children is the presentation of red envelopes containing "lucky money."

Daisy Leong recalled that in her childhood, she would get a quarter, but the amounts have escalated to a dollar, or 50 cents at the least.

The envelopes go to unmarried sons, daughters, nieces, nephews, grandchildren and friends' children — regardless of age. Franklin Leong said his parents included a bachelor uncle in their handouts up to the uncle's death at the age of 60.

A big part of the holiday used to be visiting neighbors, often bringing gifts of oranges, the Leongs recalled. But this practice has diminished as people have moved out to the suburbs.

"Before, everyone was living close to Chinatown, along your relatives and friends," Daisy Leong recalled. "You just walked. My parents never had a car."

Her own and her husband's parents came to this country from different parts of southern China, and their American-born children have vivid memories of lunar new year festivals in San Francisco's Chinese community.

The highlight was the big annual parade with its lions, dragons, cymbals, drums and gongs. "I was in it when I was a kid," Daisy Leong recalled. "I sat on a float one year, and then I marched in the Chinese drill team."

The annual tradition continues: the parade this year will wind its way along Battery, Market and Kearny Streets beginning at 7 p.m. on Feb. 26, topping off two weeks of festivities organized by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, the Chinese Culture Foundation and the city of San Francisco.

But some aspects of the celebrations have changed over the years. When Franklin Leong was a child, for instance, he and his friends had a lot of fun with firecrackers. "You could really play with firecrackers without being scared that here comes the police, you're under arrest," he said.

The Year of the Boar comes every 12 years, taking its turn in a procession that includes 11 other astrological beasts. The boar is said to portend peace and serenity, and people born under its reign are supposed to be courteous, taciturn and honest.

Other San Francisco lunar new year events this year include an outdoor carnival in Portsmouth Square from Feb. 11 to 27, a pageant in Union Square on Feb. 19, the Miss Chinatown USA Pageant at the Masonic Auditorium on Feb. 19, and Lion Dancing in the streets of Chinatown on Feb. 20. For more information, call the San Francisco Convention and Visitors Bureau at 974-6900.

Local symphony to feature cellist

Judyaba

KENSINGTON — The Kensington Symphony's third concert of the season Feb. 20 will feature local artist Judyaba, both as soloist and as composer.

She will play the Boccherini Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in G Major. Her own composition, entitled Rannunculus, a piece written for solo orchestra.

Judyaba has been a pupil of Lazo Varga, Hampton and Margaret Rowell. She received formal education at San Francisco State University and the San Francisco Conservatory. Her own experience has included the Oakland Symphony, the New Jersey Symphony and the San Francisco Opera Orchestra.

In addition she has participated in musical studies in Italy — Spoleto and Opera Barga — Carmel and Cabrillo. Frequent Bay Area appearances have been in chamber music concerts, as well as soloist.

Also featured in the concert is Martha Peterson, percussionist in Milhaud's Concerto for Percussion and Small Orchestra. The concert program also includes the Brahms' Variations for Piano and Orchestra.

The concert is at 7 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church of Kensington, 1 Lawson Road.

Opening day at track

"I can't tell you my name because I called in sick at work today," she says. She asks the guard when the track will open.

"Eleven-thirty," he says. Thirty five minutes from now.

The woman, who clenches a $5 bill, says the most exciting part of horse racing is the "easy money. Sometimes you can put down $2 and get back $20, $30. In most instances, it's tax free."

Art Lobato, ex-jockey turned PR man says "a lot of people here don't want you to take their picture or talk to them because they're not supposed to be here. A lot of them call in sick at work."

Alan Frohm, 32, doesn't have that worry. Unemployed, he says he spends $70 of his Social Security disability check at the track. "I enjoy it," he says. "The feeling of winning if your horse comes in is exciting."

It gets exciting for the jockeys, too. While the field's tallest jockey, 5-foot-9 Bruce Dillenbeck, was tightening the cinch of his horse, the animal bit him on the nose, leaving a purple welt. Dillenbeck's horse has been scratched from the race because he can't run on a muddy track.

"These horses are rambunctious," says Lobato, 32. "They'll turn on you. They're bred to run, fed to run, trained to run." He points out the paddock, the area where horses are prepped for the first race. The thoroughbred sweat. Steam drifts off their back into the chilly air.

As Lobato strides through the stadium, an elderly woman with bristly white whiskers growing in small patches on her upper lip and chin hails him down.

"I'm a trainer," she says, fingering a cheap black wig. "I'm the only black woman trainer on the West Coast." She won't give her name.

"I don't want publicity," she says.

She shuffles away.

"She's just one of the regular customers," says Lobato. "She's not exactly senile, but she fits a lot."

The opening day crowd does not burst through the gates like the horses it has come to cheer. When the initial bettors finally settle into their places, the stadium is only half full.

And not all of the patrons at Golden Gate Fields place bets.

"I pick up tickets," said Charles Johnson, 74. Toothless, wearing home-cut hair, Salvation Army clothes and an old Wallace Beery felt cap, Johnson palmed tickets from the filthy floor as he spoke.

"I try to come here every day. I find a lot of good tickets stuck onto ones that were thrown out, and I go in the cans. Everyone has to go to the cans, you know, and I find a lot of tickets there. I'm usually too busy to watch the races."

Johnson says he has made more than $165 from turning in tickets discarded by bettors in the two years he has attended the races. Total earnings for the field's 102-day 1982 season was $189,419,143. Average attendance per day was 10,462. Lobato says the average bettor spends $120 a day.

Golden Gate Fields spent $1.3 million this year to renovate the track for opening day. The grandstand was repainted, heating units were put in the clubhouse area, and a cocktail lounge decorated with neon racehorses was installed. Additions were made to the Turf Club, where only those who display "good taste and fine grooming" (no blue jeans) are permitted.

Green is the predominant color at the field: the grass is green-gold, the grandstand and half of the seats are spinach colored. Light green flats with the track's insignia flap noisily in the wind. And, of course, there is the money that seems to change hands so quickly.

More money is what the janitors want, although the agreement as to how much was a mandate. A press release from Golden Gate Fields says the union wants a 28.6 percent increase over three years. The union's representative, Sal Rosenthal, says that's an absolute lie. "That's a 16 percent raise, less than what 15 other unions get."

Most of the bettors do not insult him, but they do insult the janitors, although one woman was arrested by Berkeley police for shouting "f---" at 7:30 a.m. to stop when she saw a janitor through a picket line.

"Every year they have a picket line," says one man. "It's OK to have the right to express their opinion and they're not like the other unions. They're not killing each other."

Not everyone agrees. "I'm a picket before and we didn't get that," says a man who is named.

Two hours after the gates opened, the bugler signals the first race. Louis Bombardieri, 58 on No. 8, Retenit Bob, says "If you win you get a lot of money."

Think you're smart, says a man who has been playing the track 30 years. His biggest payoff was on the daily double.

As the horses start off, portly, wearing a faded white checkered overalls, cardigan and a red and white striped shirt, he seems unaffected. But as the horses round the track, he leans forward and presses his lips tightly.

Retenit Bob comes in second. Bombardieri wins $6.

Bombardieri smiles; his pale lips glimmer.

"You think you're smart," he says. "That's about it."

Dispute keeps janitors out

Bay Meadows Racing Association have asked the Federal Mediation Service to set up a meeting with Local 9.

The Pacific Racing Association runs 75 days of racing at GGF, while Tanforan splits its racing days between GGF and Bay Meadows in San Mateo.

About 80 janitors are involved in the labor dispute. They have been manning picket lines at the two entrances to the Albany track since Monday, joined by sympathizers from other unions, including some food service workers and paramilitary clerks. But not all unionized employees have stayed out.

When GGF opened for the season Tuesday, approximately 25 percent of the track's 920 unionized workers crossed the picket lines, according to track spokesman Norm Hershon. The percentage rose to 30 percent Wednesday and was a bit higher Thursday, Hershon said.

Tunney downplayed the impact of the strike on business, calling the first week of racing "super."

"We're operating at about 85 percent of where we were a year ago," he said, adding that the sagging economy might be partly to blame.

Attendance was 9,123 on Tuesday, down from the 12,800 who turned out on opening day last year. But Hershon attributed the drop in part to overcast skies.

Attendance was 5,758 Wednesday, compared to 7,507 on the second day last year, and 6,070 Thursday, compared to 7,514 on day three in 1982.

The total amounts wagered — nearly $1.28 million Tuesday, $1.03 million Wednesday and $1.15 million Thursday — also were somewhat lower than the comparable figures last year.

The janitors' strike centers on wages, with the union seeking raises amounting to $16 a day over three years. Management's last offer was $9.63 over three years.

The janitors now earn $52.60 for a five-hour shift. Union spokesmen said their wage demand would amount to a 16.5 percent increase after deductions for increased health and welfare costs. They said they rejected management's offer because, after these deductions, it would not leave enough to keep pace with the cost of living.

The management side said, however, that the janitors' demand would amount to a 30-percent wage boost, a bigger percentage increase than any other union had received.

Racing fans crossing the picket lines were greeted by foul language and obscene gestures, but Tunney said the patrons he spoke with "could care less" because they felt the janitors were unreasonable.

Union officials, however, laid the blame for the dispute with management. Frank Cataldi, a member of Local 9's negotiating team, said the $16 demand was never characterized as final and that the union was willing to bargain further.

And Richard Groulx, secretary-treasurer of the Central Labor Council of Alameda County, who had offered to mediate during the negotiations, accused racing officials of stalling the bargaining process by repeatedly postponing meetings.

Sixty people under the direction of Al Nicora, Ellen Zapata, Jack McDougall and Skip Howie will be soliciting funds from the Albany Community from Feb. 22 to March 22.

The Y's executive director, Mark Young, said funds help support the growing number of programs including day care, camping, gymnastics, movement education, and prenatal exercise.

Funds also go towards scholarships in certain programs where participants are unable to pay the full fee. The YMCA also offers exercise classes for adults and has limited weight room and locker room facilities for men and women, Young said.

Shooting your way around England in May

Good Image focuses on photos, not miles

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

EL CERRITO — If you've ever come back from vacation whimpering about the beautiful sunrise you glimpsed but were unable to photograph, the men of Good Image may be able to help you.

The Good Image is Hyman Shevelev, an El Cerrito estate salesman who loves photography, and Ken Altshuler, a Berkeley-based photographer. They have organized a series of photographic tours, based on the premise it's not how many miles you travel, but what kind of opportunities you have to take pictures.

"For people who like to shoot, this is a way to get pleasure working with the pros," according to Altshuler. The instruction level is geared to where you're at. Their first tour is "Spring in England," planned for 10 to 24. The itinerary includes a visit to Windsor, to Bath. The group will travel by bus through the fields and end up in London.

"That's only 120 miles in two weeks," Shevelev said. "This is not 'Europe-in-14-days.'"

When that tour is over, the two will remain several in England and then bring a group of budding English photographers to the United States. Their California excursion will run May 31 to June 14, and cover the coastline from Carmel to San Francisco, as well as visits to Lake Tahoe and Yosemite.

The California excursion will be repeated in October, there will be another English trip in September. The fee is $2,600, which covers round-trip air fare, accommodations, breakfasts, ground transportation and some social events.

"One of our trips would be the equivalent of a one-year course in photography," Altshuler maintains.

The majestic pace of these trips means that photography is paramount, his partner said. "We're not trying to go around and see everything. We intend to get to a place, stay there and really look around."

Shevelev, a native of South Africa, has been traveling and taking pictures for many years. The two men met when Altshuler was a house, and the two talked about photography and travel. Thus was born The Good Image.

Shevelev said that everything was organized to accommodate the needs of the photographer.

"Most tours use the best daylight hours for eating or traveling. You know, the light is most interesting in the morning or in late afternoon. So we will travel during day when the light is less good," Shevelev said. "And stay in one place long enough to for people to think

Photographer Ken Altshuler shot this village scene on a trip to England last year

He says that he has a lot of experience in teaching about what they've shot and shoot it again."

"Or shoot it at dawn or from another angle," Altshuler added.

"Or remember to take film along," Shevelev said with a smile.

The two men stress that their tours are not restricted to experienced semi-professional photographers with thousands of dollars worth of equipment. Even Instamatics can be used to take good pictures, they say; it all depends on what the photographer sees.

Altshuler, a native of Chicago who's had a photographic business in the Bay Area for nine years, was trained as a zoologist and served in the Peace Corps in Malaysia. That's when he began to shoot pictures.

people how to see.

"All visualization is based on what you see in your head. What I do is help you translate that into the flat medium of photography," he said.

"Of course, we're happy to help people with equipment," Shevelev said, "but our emphasis is esthetic and visual."

"You won't turn into a professional photographer," said Altshuler with a boyish grin, "but we will take you as far as you can go, to where your pictures will satisfy you. We want everyone to come back eager to keep shooting."

Altshuler says that his own special area of expertise is problem-solving, and that he enjoys figuring out ways to get certain shots.

"If you like the way some milk bottles look in a doorway, I've got the chutzpah to move them to where the light is better," he said.

That made Shevelev laugh. "And he did, too!" he said.

Shevelev, a former teacher of political science, has a good graphic eye, he says. Both say that their skills are complementary.

"We went to England to see how we travelled together, and it was wonderful," Altshuler said. "Except Hyman likes bitters and I'm an ale man."

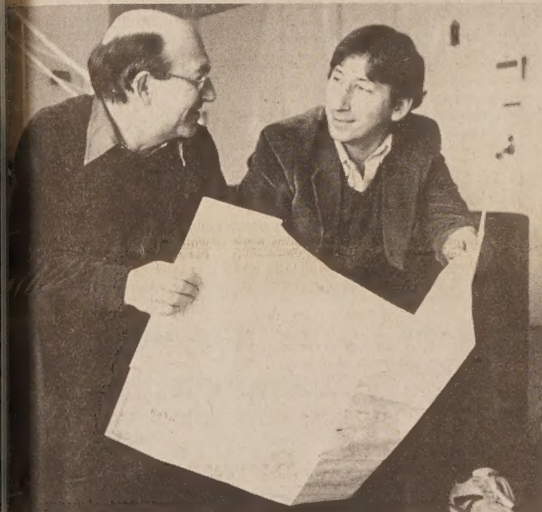

Another aspect of the tour that the two are particularly proud of is the number of local contacts they have established.

"On a regular tour, the only locals you meet are the concierge and the porters," Shevelev said. "We've set up contacts with the Royal Photographic Society (headquartered in Bath)."

The two have also arranged for 48-hour film processing, so that the group will still be in an area when the prints are returned for study and discussion.

"This tour is about what I've always done: travel, shoot and teach," Altshuler said. "For me this was a wonderful opportunity, for Hyman a dream come true."

Development fight in Kensington

KENSINGTON — Citizens for the Betterment of Kensington — a group of interested Colusa Circle residents — has gathered more than 500 signatures protesting proposed commercial development in its neighborhood.

This group will voice its concerns at a "town hall" meeting set for Thursday, Feb. 17 at 7:45 p.m. at Grace Lutheran Church, 15 Santa Fe Ave., El Cerrito.

Co-sponsors are the Kensington Property Owners Association and the Kensington Improvement Club. Also attending will be representatives of the county Planning Department, the Kensington Police and Fire departments and area property owners.

The application for the 33,000 square foot development — including removal or modification of several existing buildings and construction of several new ones — is being processed by the Contra Costa County Planning Dept. The developer is Edward Hammonds of Diversified Real Estate Investments, Inc. The new buildings would include retail shops, offices, auto services and a restaurant.

The county also has commissioned an independent traffic and parking study to determine the effects of the development on the community. Hammonds' plan proposes changes in traffic routes in the circle area, including making Oak View Avenue a one-way street between Colusa and Santa Fe avenues.

For more information, call Yvonne Devine at 527-8435 or Larry Anderson at 526-3893. They are co-chairpersons of Citizens for the Betterment of Kensington.

Albany kids may get summer school

The YMCA is organizing a cooperative project for K-8 graders

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — For the first time in five years Albany youngsters may have a chance to participate in some kind of summer school program.

Albany YMCA Director Mark Young presented the outline of a possible summer school cooperative venture with the Albany schools at the Feb. 8 board meeting.

If all goes according to plan, kindergarten through 8th grade students in a pilot program would be offered both academic classes and supervised recreational activities sponsored by the Y on school property.

"We envisage a program which fulfills the needs of many parties: the youngsters' education; the community at large; and the YMCA itself," Young said.

Last summer the Y, with the district's cooperation, offered a small program of computer classes. This summer's program would expand upon last year's success by offering a curriculum which could include basic math, science, computers, foreign languages and English, as well as arts, sports, first aid and sewing.

"The district unfortunately no longer offers a full summer program to its students," superintendent Stephen Goldstone said. "We would really like to expand summer opportunities."

"For many years we had a summer program that had between 100 and 200 kids participating," assistant superintendent Richard Rosenquist said. "1978 was the last year. Then came all the revenue cutting state-wide propositions."

Previously, school districts were reimbursed by the state for the cost of their summer programs. Now, such programs have to come out of the regular school year operating budget.

"We are prevented by law from charging parents the additional fee for a summer program," Goldstone said.

Other institutions, however, such as local YMCA's, can charge for such programs.

"We hope to be able to offer a program which would cost parents somewhere in the neighborhood of $1.25 to $2 an hour," Young said.

"For a child registered for the entire program — two morning classes and recreational time — the total cost may be as little as $70 per week.

"Much depends upon several factors — the cost of a principal or coordinator for the program, what the Y will pay teachers and also what we will have to pay the district to reimburse it for maintenance, utilities, etc.," Young said.

Educators said the need in Albany for some kind of formal summer school or summer child care is great.

"Approximately 30 percent of the households in Albany are headed by a single parent," Rosenquist said. "Of the remaining households, nearly half have both parents working."

Early responses to a late January questionnaire sent to kindergarten through 8th grade parents by the board and the YMCA showed a favorable response to the idea.

Young envisages the program as open to residents of Albany, El Cerrito, and parts of Berkeley. Albany youngsters would have first priority. Teaching positions would be offered first to Albany district teachers.

If all goes well, the program would run six weeks, from June 27 to August 5. Most of the details of the program are still to be worked out between the Y and the superintendent's office.

In other business the board accepted a $6,000 donation from the Albany High School Boosters Organization — profits from its bingo games.

"The Boosters Organization started in June when the district was forced to assess each athlete a $60 fee to participate in the after school sports program," Robert Hoyle said. Hoyle is the principal organizer behind the effort, as well as a math teacher and the head football coach at the high school.

Most of this athletic fee, which adds up to between $15,000 and $16,000 per year, is used for transportation to athletic meets. The board was forced to pass this on to students.

"We are getting nearly 275 people showing up every week (at bingo)," Hoyle said. "We process between $10,000 and $11,000 a night, distributing $8,000 or $9,000 in winnings. The balance are profits which we can use to help the sports program."

The games, which start at 7 p.m. every Saturday night at the Middle School, are legal as long as the profits go toward a charitable cause and the people who run the games are not paid.

This first $6,000 check which Hoyle presented to the Board helped to offset the original $10,000 which the district loaned the club for equipment and supplies, such as tables and chairs.

"By June, there is no doubt that we will be able to cover all the athletes' fees," Hoyle said. "We even hope to help out the cheerleaders with their equipment."

Enthusiasm for the games remains high. When asked by the board whether the AHS Boosters Organization intended to keep the games running only for the balance of the academic year or through the summer, Hoyle responded, "for the rest of our lives."

In other action the board:

- Heard a financial report by the Albany High School Swimming Pool Director, Connie Jackson. Income for the second fiscal quarter was up nearly 13 percent, with total expenses up only 1 percent.

Over the past two years pool personnel have been successful in reducing the amount the pool draws from the district's general fund. The only amount drawn from the general fund is the direct cost for the elementary and high school swim programs. In all other aspects it is self sufficient.

- Analyzed the cost of cafeteria service in the district. This year the cafeteria showed a small profit, compared with last year's small loss. The number of meals served was virtually unchanged.

"The increase in income can be traced to the opening of the snack bar in the middle school," John Fike, assistant superintendent for business services, said. "Also we are buying our dry and paper goods in consortium with other Alameda County schools."

- Approved the hiring of Janet Obata, a special day class teacher, Patrick Idica, a part-time physical education teacher, and Robert Pressnall, a full-time English/social studies teacher, all at the Middle School; Patricia Hibbard, a 3 hour per week position to teach a hearing-impaired student at the high school; Christine Alper, a part-time ESL teacher, Susan Charlip, a part-time English teacher, and Wendy Ruebman, a part-time French teacher, also at the high school. Mary Agnes Dougherty was hired as a special education instructional aide at the middle school.

- The board also approved stipends for junior varsity baseball coach Dan Williams and assistant track coaches Philip Francillon and Walter Pratt.

- The resignations of Rameen Tabatabaia, a part-time physical education aide; Helen Walker, a secretary at the Marin School; and Anita Fermin, an 8th grade teacher were also accepted.

The writing life

Lucile Bogue, El Cerrito author of the new Pinnacle paperback "Salt Lake," will do her work at a 7 p.m. dinner Feb. 22 at the Spencers in Berkeley. The California Writers Club is sponsoring the event, and reservations may be made by call Ray Nelson at 526-8356 or 526-8356.

State's toxic clean-up list includes Richmond facilities

The Liquid Gold oil storage facility on Hoffman Boulevard is among the top five of 60 hazardous waste sites targeted for a multimillion-dollar cleanup by the state Department of Health.

The department said the Legislature will use the list as a guide in allocating money from the state's $10 million-a-year cleanup "superfund."

The sites are located in 22 of California's 58 counties. Contra Costa had the most sites with 12.

Targeted sites in West County include: Hercules Properties; Centex Properties; Chevron Chemical, Ortho Division; Point Isabel; Point Pinole (Bethlehem Steel); Cooper Chemical Co., Richmond; and FMC Corp., Richmond.

Others in the top five of "worst" sites were the Purity Oil Sales of Fresno County, Aerojet General Corp. near Rancho Cordova, Southern Pacific Transportation in Placer County and the Jibboom Junkyard in Sacramento County. The McColl Chemical Dump in Fullerton, which was No. 1 on the list last year, dropped to No. 10 on the new list.

The "superfund" is fed by disposal fees paid by users of California's toxic disposal sites. The federal government also has a "superfund" project; in many cases targeted for both state and federal funds.

Sites on the 1983 list were nominated and the Health Services Department's Toxic Substances Division with assistance from the regional centers boards.

Criteria used in ranking sites include potential contamination of ground water, surface water and air; persistent human toxicity of chemicals found; and danger of fire or explosion.

The change in rankings were the result of factors including new sites added to the list, new information gathered on the sites, and the fact that potential contact and fire and explosion hazards have higher priority in the current state criteria.

Also ranking high on the state's list are Calview in Los Angeles County, Coast Wood Products in Mendocino County, Selma Pressure Treating Company, MGM Brakes in Sonoma County, the site in Riverside County and Capri Pumping Station in Angeles County.

Playing volleyball for laughs

By STEVE TADY

LABANY — The Albany PTA Volleyball League has been a source of fun and exercise for Albany residents for more than 10 years, and the league continues to organize games every other Friday night between 8 and 10 p.m.

Anyone over 18 is invited to come to the games at Albany Middle School or Albany High School. Irene Petrel is the current organizer of the league. She says the average age of the players is about 45 or 50. We have all kinds of people — the fire chief, a member of the Council, teachers from the high school. It's a good time of fun and friendship, and laughs," Petrel said.

Petrel calls all people on the player list to tell them of the next game. Whoever shows up will play.

"The best part about the evening is getting together afterward and discussing what's going on in the community. We have a little wine and cheese, it's fun," she said.

Anne Bell is one of the first players to join the league and has been going strong since the first game.

"When it started, it was the parents against the teachers. But it sort of lost the momentum. It took a lot of phone calls. But now it's going like gangbusters. We have a marvelous mix of people. Some are excellent players, and others are basket cases," Bell said.

For more information on the league contact Petrel at 524-9702 or Bell at 524-1913.

Staying afloat

As pleased to see as the subject of Steve Tady's recent article the operation of the local public swimming pools. Local pools struggling to keep afloat," Jan. 23.) Unfortunately, the information concerning Albany Pool contained an inaccuracy which could cause misunderstanding.

The Albany Pool is owned and operated by the Albany School District. We offer a full range of aquatic programs for people of all ages in our community. We charge fees for all of our public programs and to allow the continuing operation of our facility, have assumed the responsibility of running a completely self-sufficient operation. It does not require the use of school district funds.

As part of the school district, we also provide instructional programs for students in the Albany schools by part-time regular P.E. program. The pool is used by Albany School students during six weeks in the fall and by elementary school students during 10 weeks in the spring. The school district does cover the cost of the operation of these educational programs. It must be emphasized that the school district is in no position to and will not "pick up the tab" for a deficit incurred in the operation of public programs at Albany Pool.

The staff at Albany Pool and the school district continue to seek ways to reduce the operating expenses and increase income at the pool to allow for continuing cost-effective operation. While we are fortunate to have an indoor facility in which we can offer a full range of programs year round, our expenses continue to rise. The continuing support of our community will be essential. We strive to provide the type and quality program our community requires.

Sincerely,
Constance C. Jackson
Pool Director

More on missing cats

In writing in response to the article of Jan. 23rd which commented on the missing cats. Since the article appeared, I have received a number of phone calls from individuals offering different theories as to the reason for disappearances. In addition, a few callers have commented on the "sarcastic" viewpoint of the article (they're cats, who cares anyway) and other voiced their concerns over the lack of interest on the part of the Albany animal control officer.

As many family pets are indeed missing, it's obvious the disappearances are more than a coincidence. I personally have been to the Berkeley SPCA, Berkeley Pound, and the Albany Pound and tried to talk to our local animal control officer and police officials. Unfortunately, no one seems to think that a problem exists. The stock answer is "oh, you know cats wander."

In light of the missing animals some interesting possibilities exist. One anonymous caller informed me that several years ago an individual was arrested in Albany for stealing cats and selling them as laboratory animals. Another caller stated that he knew of an individual (cat hater) who frequently comes from another city to steal Albany cats and disposes of them by taking them as "strays" to a local pound.

In any case, many families are saddened by the loss of their cats. If any of your readers have constructive information which might lead to solving this problem, I would be glad to hear from them.

Black women's group saves home

The Contra Costa, Berkeley, and East Bay sections of the National Council of Negro Women and other NCNW sections from around the country worked jointly for several years to have the home of the late Mary McLeod Bethune designated as one of the nation's historical monuments.

Now their efforts have finally come to fruition. Recently, the U.S. Department of the Interior and the Bethune Museum-Archives held a signing ceremony commemorating the designation of the Bethune Council House at 1500 Vermont Ave., North West, Washington, D.C., as a national historical site.

Bethune was a black leader who received international recognition for her achievements. The 15th of 17 children whose parents originally were slaves, she went on to become a teacher, president of Bethune-Cookman College, a special adviser to President Franklin D. Roosevelt on Minority Affairs, and a special assistant to the Secretary of War for selection of Candidates for first officers. She received numerous honorary degrees including three doctorates in humanities and founded the National Council of Negro Women and the Mary McLeod Bethune Foundation.

She also was a writer, traveled extensively, was active in numerous organizations, and received many awards, including the Frances Drexel and Thomas Jefferson awards.

At the time of her death May 20, 1955, she was president emerita of Bethune-Cookman College and the NCNW.

Toddlers not getting all necessary shots

State health officials are concerned that many young children are falling into a "toddler immunization gap." Only 35 percent of the two-year-olds in California are up to date on their immunizations, recent surveys by the California Department of Health Services indicate.

To increase immunization levels, California Medical University has endorsed the Department of Health Services' declaration of February as Toddler Immunization Month and urges parents to update their children's disease record.

"State law requires that children have their immunizations completed before they enter schools and day care centers," says Dr. Charles M. Hair, CMA president. "However, if the immunizations are put off until then, these youngsters are left susceptible to serious disease during their early years."

Several recent outbreaks of measles and rubella have occurred in California, with the state accounting for about 10 percent of the nation's total cases of these diseases during 1982. School children have the highest incidence of measles and rubella, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control reports.

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends giving children DPT (diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis, or whooping cough) shots and oral polio vaccine at two, four and six months of age.

Intergenerational group set

Youth-age network is born in El Cerrito

Nora Gerber

EL CERRITO — The Open House senior center was the site for the launching of a new organization designed for persons working together with older and younger persons.

Forty persons from around the Bay Area came together to join forces in the Intergenerational Network, made up of those already experienced in the field as well as others interested in the area.

Attendees described their programs, and mingled during a potluck.

The group then discussed a Northern California Intergenerational Conference, planned for spring; funding sources; and an assessment of the needs and resources available for future network meetings.

A resource directory (listing participants in the network), a program committee (for coordinating future meetings) and an "Idea Book" listing existing cross-age programs were planned.

The documentary film, "Chilysmith Farm," which won the White House Conference on Aging Film Award in 1981, was shown.

For more information about the network, write to Hilari Hauptman, Bay Area Intergenerational Network, c/o Bananas, 6501 Telegraph Avenue, Oakland, 94609.

South failed to solve them due to a brilliant and well conceived false-card by East.

South ran off the clubs to start with and East discarded two small diamonds while West chucked a heart. Now South led his three of spades and stuck in dummy's eight. East won with the queen and led a heart.

South cashed the hearts and the king and the ace of diamonds. Everyone followed to reach a three card end.

The king of spades picked up East's deuce and West's jack and the five of spades produced the seven from East.

South decided that East couldn't bid the spade 10, went up with his ace and lost the slam.

Astrograph

If your birthday is today, Feb. 13:
In the coming year it will be your resolve and dedication which will be responsible for achieving the successes you'll envision. Your gift makes you a front runner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Be hopeful and optimistic today, but also be realistic regarding the manner in which you attempt to bring your objectives into being. My 1983 predictions for Aquarians are now ready.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
You scatter your forces too thin today, your possibilities for reaching your goals will be greatly lessened. Aim for one target at a time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Beware of tendencies today to run small problems into something larger and more complicated. Should a sticky situation arise, use good judgment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
This is not a good day to probe into confidential affairs of friends, nor to let them become involved in yours. Stay at arm's length.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Associates will mean well today, but there's a chance they might not be able to steer you in the proper direction. Think for yourself where major issues are concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Be very careful today if you are going to attempt an intricate task usually handled by an expert. It may be best to leave well enough alone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Steer clear of involvements with friends today which could require an investment on your part. You might get into something way over your head.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
To bring harmony into a domestic situation today you might feel impelled to make a promise for the sake of expediency which you may not be able to keep.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Unfortunately, responsibilities can't be rationalized away today. If you try to excuse them, they'll later pop up to haunt you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Normally you are a rather good manager of your personal resources, but today you might yield to unwise forms of extravagance and get little value for what you spend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Even though you justifiably feel lucky today, it will prove unwise to leave important matters up to the whims of fate. Without guidance, mishaps are likely.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Usually you're pretty good at presenting your views in ways which win support, but today you might talk down to people and arouse their ire.

If your birthday is Monday, Feb. 14:
Be security conscious this coming year, but don't place too much emphasis on the acquisition of worldly goods. More will come your way if you aren't materialistic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Your profitable possibilities look extremely encouraging today, especially if you are doing business with persons who are genuinely fond of you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Friends will be very responsive to your dictates and whims today. You have the gift to charm your way through anything confronting you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Heed your compassionate instincts today to be helpful. This is admirable. However, don't carry things so far that your kindness is abused.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Your greatest asset today is your ability to put those you deal with at ease, and at the same time make them feel important. No wonder you're popular!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Credit and recognition could finally be coming your way today for an accomplishment which you were instrumental in bringing about.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Words of encouragement from you can brighten spirits and arouse enthusiasm today. You'll know what to say if conditions warrant it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If you've met someone recently to whom you are attracted, allow ample time for the relationship to develop. Play it slowly, not impetuously.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Put the concerns and needs of your mate above those of your own today. Sincere supportive gestures will work wonders in your relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Conditions affecting your career and earnings look favorable at this time. Stir things up a bit to generate results.
